Crown Princess Wanda, eldest daughter of the High King Maximus, stared at the guards in shock. "What do you mean my son is missing?" She growled, staring at them.

"He - well, you know Prince Thomas," The guard tried to explain and she sighed. She did know her son, and she knew how much of a trouble maker he was. Quick as lightning, that one, just like her brother.

It was a surprise he hadn't gotten himself in to a mess this big already.

For all anyone at the royal palace knew, the Prince had been kidnapped. It seemed the most likely explanation, and who knows how often he had snuck out of the castle to run around with the common folk.

At least his brother was manageable. Sure he might be rebelling in his own way, if becoming engaged to the prince of two grand empires counted as rebelling. but Thomas took the prize of most troublesome Maximus grandson by a longshot.

In the city below, a white haired young boy in a leather jacket ducks in to a bar. He throws a flirtatious smile to the bartender, and leans over to whisper in her ear.

"Hi. My name's Tommy. I'm here to join the rebellion."
